ITEM 7.1: COURTS REFORM (SCOTLAND) BILL - REPORT ON STAGE 2

Purpose

1. To update members on the Court Reform (Scotland) Bill Stage 2 proceedings at the Scottish Parliament Justice Committee meetings of 10 and 17 June.

Stage 2 Proceedings

- 2. The Cabinet Secretary for Justice, Kenny MacAskill, spoke for the Scottish Government (SG) at day one of the Stage 2 Proceedings on 10 June 2014 and Roseanna Cunningham, Minister for Community Safety and Legal Affairs spoke for the SG at day two of the Stage 2 Proceedings on 17 June 2014. The Bill as amended at Stage 2 and details of all amendments can be found at the Scottish Parliament webpages on the Bill. However, for information, a summary of the amendments agreed is provided at Annex A and amendments lodged but not agreed (i.e. lodged but either disagreed or withdrawn) at Annex B.
- 3. All of the SG amendments some minor, some significant were agreed. Members' attention is drawn to the following:
  - The Bill now provides that the Interpretation and Legislative Reform (Scotland) Act 2010 will apply to Court of Session rules in the same way as it does to the rules to be made for the sheriff court and Sheriff Appeal Court. (Amendments 72, 73, 76 to 79 and 119)
  - Clarification of the SCJC's powers to deal with draft fees rules is now provided for. (Amendment 120)
  - Provision has been included enabling the Court of Session make rules to assist in determining whether individual proceedings fall into definition of simple proceedings (to preserve any necessary case law applicable in summary cause proceedings). (Amendment 52)
  - The simple procedure rules may be exercised so court may "facilitate negotiation" between instead of "negotiating with" parties as previously provided for. (Amendment 58)
  - Changes have been made to the provisions for remit of cases to the Court of Session (which the Lord President suggested in his oral evidence to the Committee) to provide for a single test for remit. Amendments have been made to the appeal provisions following the changes to the test for remit and the provision allowing the Court of Session to take account of its business and operational needs in deciding on whether to remit to the sheriff has been removed. (Amendments 66-71)

- 4. Five non-government amendments were also agreed. Details of these are provided below.
  - The SG supported Sandra White's amendment to restrict the privative limit to £100,000. The amendment was agreed by division (5-4).
  - The Committee agreed to John Finnie's amendments 135, 136 (introduces new section 70A) and 137 (introduces new section 75A) without division. The first two of these amendments provide that actions under £5,000 brought in specialist PI court would not be subject to simple procedure (if a s.41(1) order allows cases under £5,000 to be heard in that court). Amendment 137 creates a new rule that where proceedings for payment of up to £5,000 simple procedure limit are raised in the specialist court, any party can apply to the sheriff to have them transferred into simple procedure in the local court on special cause shown. The SG supported these amendments.
  - The Committee also agreed without division to John Finnie's amendment 142 (placing into the Bill the 'sanction for counsel' test proposed by Sheriff Principal Taylor). The test will therefore appear on the face of the Bill, though it will be left to the SCJC to flesh out and if need be to amend or modify the statutory test, by the exercise of rule-making powers. The SG supported this amendment.
