

I'm afraid pressure of time and business prevents me from completing the Questionnaire in the way requested.

Essentially I have only one suggestion to make, which goes to the heart of what I see as the problem with the system: it's too cumbersome and time-consuming.

The suggestion is this:

All information systems should be designed to ease communication between all concerned i.e. the parties and the court.

Rather than have a plethora of forms which requires the duplication of the same information far too often, could we not design a system which only requires the input of information on one occasion?

In other words, can we have access to a Database into which each party and the court contributes; and from which all the various forms can be generated?

Yours sincerely

Graham A Fordyce

Solicitor & Notary Public

28 Iain Road

Bearsden

Glasgow G61 4PA